Star

By BESSIE HARRIS

Long before Joe's fishing boat came within sight of shore he watched for the distant speck of light from the window, and as he neared land the speck of light grew and shone with his own delight in coming. Home coming was a never falling delight to He leved to warm his heart at the thought of the picture there, big blende Elizabeth, the elder sister, briskly busy about the shining cookstove, preparing for his evening meal the things he liked best-and Star, the small wraith of a sister, curled up in the couch corner, where she could easily part the curtains and peer out over the dark waters. For Star watched for Joe's white fishing beat as eagerly as his eyes searched out the light from the window. KENTUCKY.

'Lisbeth was a born grumbler, and perhaps sometimes the work did fall too heavily on her broad shoulders, for though Star might be wistful and willing, her strength was insufficient for many tasks.

The cozy cottage on the shore had been handed down from grandparents to the three children. And now all their plans to beautify the cottage was made in the hope of pleasing Star-the prettiest clothes were hers, and it was Elizabeth who still grumbling arranged for her many pleasures. And Star was radiantly grateful; her love for the big bronzed brother and the sister whose own life had known but the happiness of service, was beyond expression. As for Joe, the mere thought of her there in the lamplit cornerbrought a strange lump in his throat, in an emotion which dimmed his clear eyes as he steered toward the light. It was Elizabeth, who held open the door for him, her rosy cheeks and white aproa always a pleasant part of his welcome home picture. But it was to little Star that he turned breathlessly, as she slipped from her couch to stand laughing softly and holding out eager hands "I watched you," said Stat, "since I first saw you far against the sky, and could not tell whether you were wave or really bont."

"And while you watched," grumbled Lisbeth, I rolled cookies and biscuits til my arms ached, and they will burn in the oven this minute unless they are attended to. Star, you might at least take the pans from the oven while I talk to Joe." "I will take them," Joe offered quickly, and was off to the kitchen. That evening, when the girl had bidden them good night, lingering, her shining eyes caressing them both from the doorway, Elizabeth turned abruptly to her brother. "Joe," she said, "I have something to tell you. Something that I only old Bible for my birth date; thought looked it up. And there, folded in the birth and death place was an old letwith ours-but the letter explained is to have them run to a trough or she died, and left it there for safe keeping. Thought perhaps I'd find it whenever they want it. After they when I went to write the date of her But I didn't think to do it. I will give you mother's letter in a minute, but this is what it said: Star isn't our sister at all; she never has-belonged. One night when we were away at school a boat came drifting along without any folks, or any oars, and in it all wrapped and quiet, lay a baby. First, mother thought the tiny white face was a reflection of one big star that seemed someway to keep shining down on the boat. But when she found what it was, mother sent father out to bring in the boat, and the baby's eyes stared up at her she said, steady and shiny like the star, And so she named her. one ever came to claim the baby, and though father tried to learn at the time, there was no word of accident or loss. That's all, Joe; but I've given my young life, it seems, to the care of a child not kith or kin. And I have kept from marrying Jed Warren because of what I considered my duty."

Lisbeth paused. "I shall marry him now," she said determinedly. Joe made no reply. When at last his sister went sulkily to bed, he read the letter slowly through. Then with face aglow, big Joe jumped to his

"Star," he called softly. "Oh, my ittle Star.

There was no answer. Vaguely troubled. Joe went out to the sands standing where the water, stretched silvering before him in the moonlight. Not far from shere he saw a drifting boat. POSSIBILITIES WITH SHEEP

Farmer Who Does Not Utilize All of Available Pasturage Is Throwing Money Away.

The keeping of a reasonable number of sheep on the average farm does not necessitate the keeping of fewer dairy cows or other grazing stock This fact was determined by the United States Department of Agriculture in its recent investigation of sleep-raising possibilities in New England. It was found that farms there sheep are kept successfully Frequently Sheep Can Be Pastured on Land Which Would Not Otherwise Be Used for Grazing. So That They Do Not Displace Any Other Stock on Farm.

have practically the same number and kinds of other live stock as other farms of like area where no sheep are kept, and that the acreage in crops on the two classes of farms is sub stantially the same. The inference is that the farmer who keeps no shee; is simply throwing away enough pas turage that cows and other live stock do not utilize to net him a neat profit

IMPROPER FEEDING OF PIGS

One Big Reason Why Fall Porkers Prove Unprofitable in the Hands of Many Farmers.

One reason why fall pigs prove unprefitable in the hands of many farmers is improper feeding. Many persons have the mistaken idea that a pig must be fed a light ration unti learned today. I was hunting in the it is four or five months old to give It a chance to grow, which is one of I'd made a mistake of a year, and the biggest mistakes a hog raiser can make. As soon as fall pigs will eat ter. Seemed queer as I looked that their dams, give them all the grain grain and while they are still sucking Star's birth had never been registered they will eat. In fact, the best thing that. Mother had written it before a self-feeder, where they can find corn, oats, tankage or some other feed tion of that sort until they are ready for the market. If you have a self feeder, but shelled corn or ear corn in one part of it and tankage in another, or provide separate self-feeders one for the corn and one for the tankage, and then let the pigs be the judge of how much to eat of each onstituent.

CHECK DISEASE AMONG HOGS

Animals Become Infected with Tuberculosis Principally From Following Cattle.

Eradicating tuberculosis from cattle will practically solve the problem of controlling the disease among swine That is the opinion of veterinary ex perts experienced in the handling as post-mortem examination of swine re ceived at the principal market cen ters. By means of a simple and practical marker, hogs may be tat tooed with distinguishing letters and figures, and when disease is found by post-mortem examination the identity of such animals is known. With simple system of records it is thu possible to trace a shipment to the farm from which it came and stum out infectious diseases at their source Evidence shows that swine become in feeted with tuberculosis principally from cattle, either by following them in feed lots or pastures, by receiving infected dairy by-products, or by eat

Anna Belle's Dinner

By AGNES G. BROGAN

Anna Belle had come to her last ifteen cents; it was as bad as that. Anna Belle and been homeless, indeed. ace grandma Brown died. The notherless baby had been safe in the old woman's care, and when grandma are herself, Anna Lelle most grate lly had given it. Now that it be e accessary for the girl to earn livelihood in the big unaccustomed ly, she found how unfitted the sim le round of home duties left her for The business world reater tasks. is a very confusing place in its exons for 'experience, Every adver ement that Anna Belle sought out eagerly, ended with that disappoint requirement.

As Anna Belle went, like a small ay nun in her woolen suit and gray down the walk, she stooped to ack a scarlet bloom to fasten be ith her own rose cheeks, and con red what would be best to buy fifteen cents. One roll and a cup coffee, she decided, would be all [4] she might expect, so Anna Belle de her way into the inviting Dutch erior of the cafeteria. She carelly followed the others with her apopriated tray, keeping her face reso tely from the tempting array of food ee was to be her entire allotment. erhaps, she thought hopefully, the ant meal would take the edge at ast from her healthy country appete; but alas! the roll and coffee were Il insufficient.

It was not until she had finished. with her troubled reflections. hat Anna Belle saw the doughnut. t was a tempting, taunting doughnut. eliciously light and brown, with an dor of hidden nutmeg like grandma Brown's own. Suddenly tears and nemories clouded the girl's eyes. That he doughnut was part of a satisfying neal belonging to an opposite table mpanion, Anna Belle did not realize. he only knew all at once, that she vas miserable, penniless and alone. And then, more to screen her tear-filled eyes than in hope of finding work. she unfurled the newspaper she had 🕠 bought that morning, and scanned again it's 'Help Wanted' pages. When he lowered the paper, her table comanion had departed, leaving a halfinished meal behind him. The doughnut was gone-she noted that, but there was a savory slice of ham, some glorious browned potatoes, a slice or two of tomate on its lettuce leaf. Anna Belle hesitated no longer. The voice of hunger was more insistent than that of convention, why waste food which was discarded? She helped berself rapidly from the opposite dishes, and rapidly ate, and as she finished, a pleasant-faced young man slipped into the recently-vacated chair opposite and placed his tray before There was another doughnut on this tray and a steaming cup of coffee, but Anna Belle was tempted no longer. With hunger appeased, her bright courage returned.

"Beg pardon," said the young man "and please don't be offended at my question. I see you are interested in the 'Help Wanted Female' department. Could it be just possible that you are looking for employment? Because if you are," he added hastily, "our firm is in urgent need of an office woman."

Anna Belle gasped. Then she smilshook her head.

"Experienced of course," she quoted. "Not necessarily," the young man answered eagerly. "Fact is, we are hoping to train a girl, making her competent for our own needs, you understand. And we'd be willing if she was-well, worth while," finished the young man honestly, "to take her on and coach her. Dad has his own ideas regarding his own office. Pice With Jelly, Egg and Toast, Greens, Milk, Bread and Butter Make Admirable Noon-Day Meal for Youngster.

Simple, clean, wholesome food of the right kinds fed to children in the proper quantities will go further, home economics specialists declare, toward assuring youngsters normal health and a sturdy constitution than any other factor. Yet, even in this land of plenty, many children are undernourished. FAT ABSORPTION IN COOKING DOUGHNUTS

Amount Varies Greatly on Different Occasions.

Frying Under Fat Requires Less Time Than When They Are Floated in It-Amount of Flour in Dough Determines Quality.

That fat absorption by fried batters and doughs will vary greatly in amount on different occasions, that the more flour there is in a dough the less fat it absorbs in frying, that reducing the time of frying lessens fat absorption, and that frying doughnuts under fat requires less time than when they are floated in it, are some of the results disclosed in a long series of experiments which the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture has completed re-

Twenty pounds of dough can be so made up and fried as to take up ten pounds of fat in frying or so made up and fried as to take up only one pound of fat. Doughnuts made with plenty of sugar, butter and eggs, absorb morfat than those which are less rich The more flour incorporated in the dough, the less the fat absorption, but sometimes it is at the expense of the quality of the doughnst.

The longer doughnuts are kept in the frying fat, whether because the fat is not hot enough or because the doughnuts are too thick, the greater will be the amount of fat they take At 185 degrees C, the temperature fat should be when doughnuts are put in, three minutes will suffice for cooking those which have been rolled to one-fourth-inch thickness if the doughnuts are allowed to float in the fat. If doughnuts are forced under the fat during the frying, the experiments made prove that better doughnuts will result with less expenditure of time and fuel. Dough rolled to onefourth-inch thickness can be cooked in one and one-half minutes by this meth od at a temperature of 185 degrees C This method of submersion was foun to reduce the cracking during frying and the consequent fat absorption

REMOVABLE RUGS ARE HANDY

Arrangement of House, Wim Selection of Furnishings and Use of Labor. Saving Contrivances Assist Housekeepers.

Changed living conditions have brought changes in house-cleaning methods. When houses were less completely heated, and parts of them were losed during the cold months, spring house-cleaning was necessary to get he closed rooms ready for use durng the warm months, and fall houseleaning was necessary to prepare the louse for winter. Nowadays, all the cooms in most houses are used and pheavals in spring and fall are no true to the best of our knowledge and belief. onger necessary. Moreover, the increasing use of removable rugs and some of the new cleaning devices make it much easier to take the dirt out day by day or week by week. Not all housekeepers realize how much the work of keeping things clean can be essened by choosing the right things and handling them in the right way. This is not merely a matter of laborsaving devices like vacuum cleaners, but depends partly on how the house s planned, what furnishings and finof caring for them is organized.

Daily Care of Carpets

For the daily care of woolen or cot ton carpets and rugs, a carpet sweeper | Lo is very good, because it takes up lint and coarse dirt without raising the lust. For more thorough cleaning some other appliance must be used.

the brushes of the carpet sweeper de not go deep enough into the carpet to remove fine dirt. A vacuum cleaner is excellent, but if that is not avail able, effort should be made to find some other thorough but comparatively dustless process. Using a dampened room and scattering left-over tea leaves, bits of rumpled, dampened newspaper, or one of the commercial sweeping preparations on the carpet before sweeping, helps to prevent dust from flying. These dampened materi als must be used with caution, how ever, or stains will result, especially on delicately colored carpets. Wiping a carpet with a dampened cloth after more dust and freshens the carpet.

Small rugs should be cleaned out o doors, if possible, preferably on the dry grass or dry snow. They should be placed right side down, beaten with a flat carpet beater, swept, turned over, and swept again. Hanging rugover a line while they are being cleaned, or holding them by the corners and shaking them, strains then badly; it may break the threads or loosen the bindings and cause the end

Using Soap and Water on Rugs.

While as much width as possible is desired, it should not be accompanied with roughness about the shoulders and the hips or hocks. The legs should be rather short, stout, and set wide apart. A calf that stands high from the ground, cut up in the flank, and shallow in the heart girth. has little chance of developing into a useful or profitable breeding animal.

After you have found a calf with good general appearance, have someone hold it so that you can put your hands on it. This is the best way to determine what are called "condition" and "quality." Condition means the amount of flesh and fat the calf has. Select a calf in good growing condition, but not excessively fat. The beef calf for breeding purposes should have great depth of natural flesh and be free from roughness or coarseness in any way. By running the open hand along the back and sides with a slight pressure of the finger tips the amount and quality of condition may be determined. A calf in proper growing condition, while not possessing the depth of flesh of a mature animal should have a smooth, even covering of firm though not hard flesh along its back and sides and over the shoulders.

Quality may be determined by the eye of the experienced judge, but the hand may also be used to advantage. All the following indicate quality: thick coat of hair that feels soft and silky and looks glossy; a loose, pliable skin that does not seem thick, rough. or tightly stretched over the body; ave strong, clean bones without
